

As a resident of the Portland, Ore. area, I frequently enjoy listening to Air1 radio, which is locally rebroadcast via translator on FM 102.7. Air1 is the only radion station I listen to, and I appreciate the fact that I can listen to the same programming when I travel to other areas across the country.

If the FCC were to make translator radio service only available via LPFM service, I fear I would not be able to hear the programming currently available.

Please support the service Air1 provides, as it is in the public interest to support an organization that is completely funded by the public already.
